American intelligence chief to resign in January

From Patrick Brogan

Washington, Nov 24
Mr George Bush, the director of the Central Intelligence tor of the Central Intelligence Agency (ClA) announced today that he will resign on January 20, the day on which President Ford hands over the Government to Mr Jimmy Carter.

Mr Bush has said that he feels a certain lack of sympathy for him among other officials, and he clearly feels Republican politician, which is not necessarily a disqualification in a Democratic Administration, but would not help.

In selecting his successor, Mr Carter may take the opportunity to reorganize the intelligence agencies, which have been under a cloud since the ClA scandals became public that the new President should that the new President should be allowed to make a fresh start. He is a prominent Republican politician, which is not necessarily a disqualifi-cation in a Democratic Administration, but would not
